The Rush Limbaugh Show
1270 Avenue of America
New York, NY 10020

April 16, 2009

Dear Mr. Limbaugh,

We represent around 15,000 mounted foxhunters throughout the USA. Recently I have been inundated with calls from the many of our constituents who are fans of yours (to include myself) that are appalled by your new alliance with HSUS the Humane Society of the United States. It is obvious you have not done your homework looking into what HSUS really represents. They are not an animal welfare organization; HSUS is the largest, richest animal rights/vegan organization in the world. The organization itself is just the tip of the iceberg with puppet affiliates all around the globe. I speak all over the world exposing animal rights issues and working for animal welfare. I am considered an expert on animal rights organizations and tactics, especially HSUS. You are making a huge mistake aligning yourself with HSUS. I would wager an educated guess that the majority of people who listen to and love your show are targets of HSUS and the animal rights radical agenda.

HSUS's role in the animal rights makeup of organizations is to appeal to the most animal lovers. Groups like PETA bring the issues to the media with the quiet backing of HSUS, lurking in the shadows, condoning/agreeing with PETA's campaigns while down playing PETA's methods and outlandish antics to keep their profile low and keep our money flowing in.

HSUS knows that capitalizing on emotional animal issues, even when they misrepresent and distorted them, will win over common sense and good animal husbandry every time.

HSUS has come out against hunting, circuses, nature parks, zoos, medical research using animals, animals used by the military to save lives, rodeo, eventing, horse and dog racing, animal sporting events, eating meat and fish and even pet shows. They get their main support from unknowing pet owners. HSUS are experts in the use of linguistics, evading the answers to direct questions and hiding their real agendas. HSUS has enough money to give every dog in a welfare shelter air conditioning, heating and could throw in a chew toy if it were interested in welfare.

Animal rights or vegans are a political view whose bottom line is a petless/meatless society. Nothing wrong with being a vegetarian for whatever reason, but a vegan is a political view that is pure animal rights doctrine which purports of no exploitation of animals for any reason. I know that this must sound very radical to you, but we can prove it. Animal rights groups have little or no tolerance for life styles different then their own. They justify their views by comparing and manipulating: religion, the holocaust, women's rights and criminal behavior to perpetuate their twisted rationale for animal rights.

They spend their time and money trying to make laws and criminalize groups that love, cherish and live with animals on a daily basis. They believe that every animal has the exact same right as a human being. Animal welfare on the other hand (which we are) believes we spend our time and money helping animals; we realize man has changed the world to the extent that we must step in for many animals to survive. Animal welfare is about making sure animals are treated humanely and at the same time realizing: we eat animals, we wear animals, we live with animals, we love animals and that animals are good for us both physically and mentally.

With all due respect Mr. Limbaugh, you the recognized leader of the conservative party have been duped by HSUS, who are experts at fooling the American public and talking out of the side of their mouths. There is no question the issues they got you to speak on are wrong and important. The problem is they are very good at using events and obvious wrongs to animals to further their much more radical and hidden agendas. They hide these from the public and in fact overwhelmingly most of the 10.5 million people they say they represent don't have a clue what HSUS really stands for. HSUS has been caught over and over distorting the truth and in lies about animal issues.

If in passing, the next time you talk to Wayne Pacelle, their CEO, ask him if he is a vegan, ask him how many of the key leadership in HSUS are vegans? The answer, if he doesn't evade or talk around the question, will astound you. Puppy mills, dog fighting and animal cruelty are all horrible things that need to be stopped, but that isn't what HSUS is about. They use those issues to tighten the noose around our necks where the end result is not about puppy mills. Their proposed legislation affects legitimate dog owners and breeders. Another example is the issue of dog fighting, a despicable activity no one should condone, but the language they propose in these bills provided to legislators would not only stop dog fighting but would also stop the use of hunting with dogs and could end all hunting. The same applies to many of their puppy mill bills.

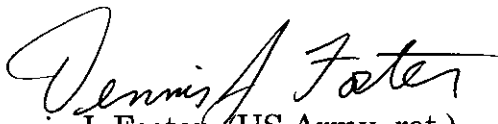

I could write reams of information on what HSUS has done in the past to distort and fool the public. They fully intend to confuse the issues and make you think HSUS is about welfare. Just analyze the confusion in the name they chose to represent themselves to the public. "The Humane Society of the United States"... they are not a humane society and until recently never even contributed to any local humane groups. They are not and never have been a United States Government agency. They fool a lot of people who think there is a connection; maybe because of all the money they spend lobbying and getting the politicians to do their political dirty work by introducing their legislation.

If you have your researchers look into where HSUS gets its money, who gives them money, where they spend their money, who they are affiliated with, who they hire to work for them, the law suits and legislation they get involved with and take a hard look at their website and what it is trying to teach our children, its links to other sites, their emphasis on a vegetarian life style and Wayne Pacelle's connections with some of the most radical animal rights leaders it will become painfully clear who they really are.

Lastly, the real travesty of your support for HSUS is now you and Obama agree on an important misrepresented, major concern of the public which neither of you understands. Obama has stated publicly he is for animal rights and has appointed HSUS sympathetic people to his regime. HSUS gave Obama their full backing, the first presidential candidate they ever fully supported. After listening to your very comprehensive intelligent analysis on Obama's hidden agendas and socialist plans, your support of HSUS now falls right into the animal rights/vegan trap. Can't you see that? You have no idea how emotional an issue this is to the many of us that support you and know the truth about HSUS. This is about taking away our personal liberties and freedom. It is about big government being led by an organization that is not interested in what is best for animals and ignores experts in animal matters to push their personal agenda.

Thank you for your attention to these matters and please take another look at the real HSUS.

If you'd like more details I'd be happy to provide them.

Sincerely,
Lt. Col. Dennis J. Foster, (US Army, ret.)
